FIGHT ON THE CUBAN TREATY

CONGRESS WILL INVESTIGATE POSTAL FRAUDS.

(Special to The Herald.) Washington, Oct. 3 .- The coming extra session of congress to convene Nov. 9 will be devoted almost exclusively to a consideration of the Cuban reciprocity treaty. The speaker to be, Mr. Cannon, will not announce the committees until the opening of the regular session in December. With the exception of providing the necessary machinery for matters in hand, business will thus be restricted to channels arrangement with Cuba, and this oppo-Bition has strengthened rather than weakened since last winter. The Cuban treaty will be ratified, however, by both senate and house. This is the opinion of those who are credited with con-trolling congressional action

There are several reasons why no financial legislation will probably result from the constant agitation of the subject during the past year. First it may be said that the political leaders, and all prominent members are more or less concerned in politics, recognize the inadvisability of any money legislation immediately preceding a national election. The Republicans fear that it would give the Democrats an issue they do not now possess, and with the large independent vote which is now a marked feature of our national politics they are chary about casting a straw which might turn the balance even to a slight degree. Those whe even to a slight degree. Those whe really favor a revision of the currency system believe that an educational process is necessary before the people will realize its importance. There will be a congressional post-office inquiry, and this notwithstand-ing the effort which has been made to clean up the matter in such a way as to render it unnecessary. So many po-lifical ends have been picked up in the course of the inquiry that it will be impossible not only to keep it out of congress, but to keep it out of the campaign next year. The Democrats will naturally insist upon taking a hand, and the Republican, in self-defense, if for no other reason, will be called upon to participate to neutralize what reasibly might be made into camwhat possibly might be made into campaign material by the Democratic party. The only point so far where exception has been taken to the course pursued by the administration is the investigation might. have been carried into higher channels. important neighbor in calling the legislative branch of this government together to ratify the action of the Cuban congress. If this action had been taken on Cuban's responsibility and initiative the situation would be different, but it was practically demanded by the United States, and Cuba merely complied with those demands. The midsummer proposition to call the extra session together in October was due to the apparent demand for financial legislation, but when the president was shown that this demand was not so urgent and that it would in all probability result in no agreement, the idea was abandoned.

Second Fiddle.

Second Fiddle.

The statement that Senator Fair-anks would accept the second place on the Republican national ticket caused quite a ripple of interest, but it is known that there was nothing in it. The administration is taking no hand in selecting a running mate with the head of the ticket next year. Governor Durbin of Indiana is an avowed candidate for the vice predictions. date for the vice presidential nomina-tion, and the Fairbanks announcement was a play in Indiana state politics of exception of providing the necessary machinery for matters in hand, business wil Ithus be restricted to channels desired by the administration. There will be considerable opposition to the arrangement with Cuba, and this opposition has strengthened rather than weakened since last winter. The Cuban treaty will be ratified, however, by both senate and house. This is the opinion of those who are credited with controlling congressional action.

There will be no financial legislation of any importance either at the extrasession or subsequently at the regular fession. The senate may pass a modified form of the Aldrich bill, but this would not be accepted by the house. The ideas set forth by Representative Fowler, which include the retirement of greenbacks, a tax on government deposits in national banks, and an asset currency, are bitterly opposed not only by Democrats, but by many of his fellow Republicans. The house may pass some form of financial bill different, however, from that which will find favor in the senate. This would lead to a joint conference, which if it resulted in any agreed measure, such measure would contain no ratical change in the present money system of the country.

New Issue Would Be Raised.

General John C. Black, as a possible Democratic candidate for the presiden-cy, is an idea which has come to Wash-ington out of the west. The movement in his favor apparently originated in California, coincident with his election as commander of the G. A. R. General Black is a strong man and very popular in Illinois, his native state. He has held the office of United States district elastic currency, that is, to raise money to move the crops, will have become void by the time congress gets under way, and such an act would have to pass on its intrinsic merit rather than to relieve a necessity of the hour. with public life for many years. His remarks are addressed to persons of all political opinions, since the questions now raised are not necessarily matters of party politics, nor indeed is it likely that the issues will be ultimately decided on strictly party lines." He begins by saying:

"It is difficult to believe that the results of the investigation will not convince every impartial man of the ne-

vince every impartial man of the ne-cessity for some reconstruction of the system which has remained stationary and unaltered for more than half a century while every other policy has been modified and adapted to meet modern requirements."

Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain points out that the property of the working classes has increased in greater pro-portion in the protected countries than in the United Kingdom, and says:

Cobden Berated.

"Free trade, if it had ever existed, might have secured for us all that its promoters promised, but free imports without free trade have brought us face to face with problems which never entered into Cobden's calculations. We know that the idea of a united empire did not appeal to him, and that he re-garded colonies as an encumbrance to be got rid of as soon as possible. The little Englanders who follow his lead are not likely to be moved by any con-sideration arising out of our new found pride and faith in our distant kins men. But what would Cobden have said if he had foreseen that the trade

Is it not childish to ignore the fact that by bargaining on equal terms other na-tions have been able to promote their special interests and that if we also had in our hands weapons of retalia tion, we should probably be able to bring the world much nearer a universal free trade system than it has ever been since Cobden's time? Our free food friends wil have to be a little more definite and more accurate.

Blessing or Curse.

"They have to explain why the transfer of taxation, say from tea to bread. a. would be disastrous, though it bene fited our industries and restored there to something like the relative position which they enjoyed twenty years ago. They will have to decide once for all whether foreign bounties are a bless-ing or a curse; whether 'dumping' is a philanthropic operation, whereby foreigners are endeavoring to secure the welfare of this country, or an insidi-ous attempt to ruin our industries and obtain our markets for themselves. They will not be allowed to evade this nestion by the cheap device of abus-ing their opponents."

Dealing passionately with the accusation that his policy is intended to reduce the "workman and his family to starvation," Mr. Chamberlain writes: "Let them at least admit that, rightby or wrongly, this policy is propounded in the interests of the masses of the people, of the poor much more than of the rich, and that those who are responsible for it have earned by strenuous endeavor in the past the right to resent the charge of neglecting the in-terests of the industrial population.
